Cultural comparison between Cameroon and Sri Lanka

1. The Concept of time: "Kinship Flexibility" vs "Cosmic Alignment"

- Cameroon(Relationship-Driven Time):

Cameroon time is elastic because human connections tend to override the clock. If a cameroonian is on his way to a meeting and runs into a relative or an old Friend, it is culturally unacceptable to cut the conversation short just to be on time. Time bends for community obligations

- Sri Lanka (Astrologically-Driven time):

In Sri Lanka, time doesn't bend for people; it bends for the stars. Before starting anything major—opening a business, signing a contract, getting married, or even boiling milk for the New Year—Sri Lankans consult astrologers for the Nekkath (auspicious time). If the cosmos say the perfect time to sign a document is exactly 10:42 AM, everything stops until 10:42 AM.

- Presentation Punchline: In Cameroon, a meeting starts late because you ran into an uncle; in Sri Lanka, a meeting starts late because the planets weren't aligned yet.
